And the jokes that you made me confess.
You can keep whatsoever you care to—

But please send me back what I'm missing—
The cold cash I wasted on you.

RICHMOND WINS FIRST CONTEST FROM OAKLAND TECHNICAL HIGH

That Richmond high school will be represented by a football team of championship caliber this season was indicated yesterday afternoon when the Blue and Red gridders ploughed their way to a to a well-earned 15 to 6 victory over the Oakland Technical high school eleven on the latters' field.

The contest was probably one of the most important of the prep school practice season, Tech having won the championship of the O. A. L. last season, while Richmond, under the direction of Coach Ivan Hill, has established a wonderful record during the past three years.

Due to the fact that the season is just barely under way, Coach Hill's charges played straight football throughout. The Richmond eleven made practically all of its gains on line bucks, which very seldom failed to produce yardage.

Richmond Takes Lead

The locals took an early lead by scoring a touchdown before the game was five minutes old. After an exchange of punts, a Tech back fumbled and Richmond was in possession of the ball on Tech's thirty-yard line. A series of line plunges proved successful and Carol Pitchford went over for the first score of the game. Cornell made a pretty drop kick for the extra point, making the score 4 to 0.

Tech came right back in the same quarter and put over a touchdown on a long forward pass. The attempt at conversion failed.

No more scoring occurred until the final quarter, when Richmond opened up an offensive and tallied eight points. A Tech man was tackled behind hisfoul goal line with the ball in his possession, giving Richmond two points. Weisgerber made the final score shortly before the final whistle blew when he went around right end for a touchdown.

Weisgerber Is Star

The local gridders outclassed their opponents in every department of the game, and Coach Hill bids fair to mold together another powerful eleven. Although a little weak at end and tackle, the line showed up strong in the center while the backfifield played brilliantly.

Weisgerber, a transfer student to Richmond from Tiffin, Ohio, where he was an all-state halfback, was the bright star of yesterday's contest. Weisgerber showed that he can hit the line like a pile driver and also backs up his line nicely.

Over 100 students accompanied the Richmond team yesterday and did some organized rooting under the leadership of Al Axelson, yell leader.

Fund Raised By Builders 'Change For Jap Relief

By subscription $125 was raised last night for the Japanese relief fund of the Red Cross at the meeting of the Contra Costa County Builders Exchange in the Exchange building. It is expected to double or triple this amount at the next meeting.

E. B. Bull of the Appraisal and Sales Corporation, who has been here only a short time, but is already an ardent Richmonder, spoke before the meeting on the necessity for the success of the huge booster organization about to be formed here. He pointed out that in the absence of any active chamber of commerce, such an organization is sorely needed.

The Builders Exchange is planning to be largely represented at the meeting to be held next Thursday noon at which the organization will get under way. A large number of the Exchange members have signified their intentions of being present.

The monthly banquet and social night of the Exchange will include a program of entertainment that is promised to be extraordinary. Members of the plaster and brick crafts are to be in charge of the entertainment, and the members of the board of directors are to serve the banquet. The latter are Al Hill, P. M. Sanford, James Walker, F. A. Mero, J. I. Collins, E. H. Higgins and B. J. Ballantyne. One hundred per cent attendance is expected.

Report of the state builders convention at Capitola, September 1, 2 and 3, was given by Secretary L. C. Dexter.

Hercules Damage Estimated To Be Near $150,000.00

Yesterday morning at Hercules a crew of 100 men, including 75 carpenters, were put to work cleaning up the wreckage as the result of the explosion Thursday morning, in which Frank Haggerty lost his life, when the nitro-glycerine storage house was wrecked.

Plant officials were engaged yesterday in making a survey of the damage but were not prepared to make any estimate of the loss. It is anticipated, however, it will approach $150,000.

As soon as the injured men had been cared for the company sent a hurry call to San Francisco for 75 carpenters. They reported for work yesterday morning and immediately began repairing and rebuilding damgaed structures. Not a building in the big plant escaped damage.

Officials are still unable to explain the explosion. Everyone connected with the plant agreed that it was fortunate, indeed, that there was not a greater toll of life. The power of the explosion seemed earthward inf radius. ad-spreadingHRDLU and directly upward lacking a spreading radius.

SQUARE DANCE CLUB ENTERTAINS OAKLAND

Liberty Homestead of Yeomen entertained members of the Square Dance club and a delegation from Oakland Homestead last night, with a dance followed by a watermelon feed. Only routine matters were taken up at the business meeting.

LEAGUE IGNORED BY THE COUNCIL IN TERMS DICTATED TO GREEK COURT

PARIS, Sept. 7.—Throughout many circles comment upon the action taken by the council of ambassadors reflects the opinion that Mussloini and Poincare have dictated a policy in regard to the award to Italy of almost the entire demand made by her upon Greece, which establishes those two gentlemen in rather too powerful positions as respects the politics of all Europe.

The ultimatum delivered by Italy to Greece has been almost wholly confirmed, the League of Nations has been ignored, Greece has been handed severe terms, Poincare and Mussolini have achieved a long coveted position by putting through Italy's program in face of the opposition offered by Great Britain.

According to the decision of the council, Greece must ffirst send a handsome apology to Italy and must solemnly salute the Italian squadron which, with one British and one French warship, will be sent to Paraeus. In addition to this Greece must hold a solemn service in the Athens cathedral for the slain members of the Italian commission on the Albanian boundary, and this service must be attended by all members of the Greek government.

Then, and only then, will the "council of ambassadors fleet" sail away after paying one small tribute to Greece's damaged dignity by firing a salute.

Meanwhile the council appoints a commission to consider the indemnity clases and Greece's capitulation. Pending such decision Greece must deposit 50,000,000 lire as evidence of good faith. Italy will only leave Corfu when Greece has paid. England's demand that a neutral country sit on the commission of inquiry was not acceded to, but the chairman will be a Japanese.

Thus ends the Graeco-Italian crisis, but diplomats are more and more alarmed over the strained relations between Italy and Jugoslavia. According to reports, the latter is seeking an alliance with the soviets.

Must Pass Exams Each Year To Be Able To Teach

The meeting of the county board of education in Martinez yesterday was relieved of monotony by the application of the new rule concerning the issuance of certificates to teachers who are not provided with certificates from Universities or Teachers' Colleges, which is in effect that all teachers other than those above mentioned will receive certificates limited to one year only and that to obtain new certificates an examination on the constitution of the United States will be necessary each year.

This ruling was called to the attention of the teachers, when the board issued certificates with the notation in red ink, "Operative for one year only." Superintendent Hanlon explained that his ruling is in compliance with a law enacted by the last legislature and which became operative August 17.

ENJOYING THEIR VACATION

TRUSTEES HEAR COMPLAINTS ON TELEPHONE AND MAIL SERVICE

The people of El Cerrito are after better rural mail service and a better telephone service. Both questions came up before the trustees at their meeting last night, and every effort will be made to remedy these matters.

The people of the town are "enjoying" a ten party service, something that would not even be tolerated in "Hickville," let alone a town of nearly 3000 people. Part of the subscribers are hooked on to the Berkeley exchange and part on the Richmond exchange.

The company has offered to make Schmidt Lane a dividing line and all phone users north of this point to be connected with Richmond, and all on the south side to have Berkeley phones. It was also suggested by the telephone company representatives at a previous meeting that the company might be willing to do away with the 10-party lines and install 4-party lines.

Trustees iZmmerman at the trustees meeting refused to be a party to ratifying such an agreement, maintaining that the residents should all be placed on one exchange or the other, or that an independent exchange for El Cerrito be established. He claimed the company had exchanges in many towns, much smaller than El Cerrito.

The result of the discussion was that the matter was continued till the next meeting, when it is expected that all the members of the board will be present.

The Mail Problem

H. Ostner appeared before the board and wanted to know if something could not be done to get better mail service for the people of the town and surrounding territory who are on the rural service routes. The speaker said that as matters stand now, a letter posted to some one just north of El Cerrito had to go to Berkeley first, and then be brought back the next day by the rural carrier. It was his opinion that a rural route should be established for El Cerrito and environs.

To look into the matter a committee of Mayor Lee, Trustee A. Zimmerman, and H. Ostner was appointed to confer with the postal officials in San Francisco, and Senator Samuel Shortridge. These men will be invited to visit El Cerrito and look over the situation, and it is possible they can suggest a remedy that will do away with the many complaints that are received.

Makes Rule On Divorce Cases Proofs Needed

Divorces will not be granted couples without corroborative evidence, was the statement made by Judge H. V. Alvarado from the superior bench yesterday, when he denied Pearl Davis a divorce from C. R. Davis.

The suit was brought on the grounds of cruelty, and the plaintiff testified that her husband was inhumanly brutal to their little boy, and on one occasion, when there was a difference of opinion had told her "to get the hell out of here."

The couple reside in Martinez.

Suits Filed Here In Justice Court Carry 202 Names

Two suits of more than usual importance from the standpoint of the number of defendants and from the size of the documents necessary to set forth the complaint were filed in the court of Justice John Roth yesterday.

Two hundred and two names appear in the list of defendants, many of whom are residents of Richmond. One compalint required 213 legal pages and the other 168 legal pages to set forth the matter brought to the consideration of the court. It is the most voluminous document with which Judge Roth has ever had to deal in his court.

The plaintiff is the Western Groups Security company and the suit is brought to compel the stockholders of the Western Guaranty & Mortgage company to share in the liabilities of that company to the Western Securities company. The amounts asked of the various defendants are small but aggregate in the neighborhood of $8000.

M. W. A. PROGRAM REQUIRES MORE THAN TIME SET BY COMMITTEES

The feature of the first day of the encampment of the Modern Woodmen of America in this city was the parade which marched from Macdonald and Second streets to Macdonald and Sixteenth streets, counter-marching to the grounds at First and Macdonald.

The first day of the encampment came up the expectations of the officials responsible for its success. Early in the morning yesterday the first arrivals appeared at the encampment grounds, the drill teams resplendent in their natty uniforms and with their axes, symbols of their order, gleaming in the sunlight.

As told in the Record-Herald of yesterday many high officers of the order are inattendance and have prominent parts in the program which will really get well under way tomorrow.

Five drill teams were on the grounds by 12 o'clock, reporting to General Riehemann of Rock Island, Ill., who has charge of the competitive drills. In the evening drill teams arrived from all over the northern part of the state.

The parade at 7:30 made a gallant show, led by the band and embracing representatives of the police department, fire department, civic officers, Modern Woodman drill teams, the Moose drum corps, Moose lodge, Redmen's lodge, civilians and juvenile organizations.

Alois F. Browning was marshal of the parade and handled it in a perfect manner.

Because of a program which has continued to grow from the time of its inception down to the moment when the encampment opened, it is thought this morning that it will be necessary to continue the encampment until Sunday noon.

One of the big events of the afternoon today is the ball game between the two crack Woodmen teams of northern California, Camp 7777 of San Jose and Goodfellowship Camp 9633 of San Francisco.

These teams have contested for first honors for a long time and as an indication of how well matched they are it is pointed out that last Sunday they played an eleven inning game with a score of 1 to 0.

Following is the line-up for today's game:

Modern Woodmen Camp 7777 of San Jose: Leitch, cf; Gregg, 3b; Erich, 1b; Lannin, lf; Cunnaham, rf; Carter, 2b; Deneyr ss; Woods, p; Hermandez, c; Gleason, utility.

Goodfellowship Camp 9633, of San Francisco: Nardini, cf; Maloney, 2b; J. Jose, ss; Nascarelli, lf; Puccinelli, c; Johnson, rf; Peini, 3b; Malloy, p.

COOLIDGE STANDS PAT

AMONG the Harling policies which President Coolidge has assured the country he will maintain during his administration is the support of the policy of the protective tariff. President Coolidge has been a lifelong believer in the "America first" policy. He believes in encouraging American industry and protecting the American producer from unjust competition from other nations in which wages and production costs are much lower than in the United States.

Recognizing that there are unsettled conditions throughout most of the world and particularly in Europe, the publican congress which passe the present tariff law included therein what is known as the "flexibility clause" which authorizes the president, after investigation by the tariff commission, to make changes in the tariff rates not to exceed 50 percent in either direction when good cause has been shown why the changes should be mad. Txponents of the free trade principle looked upon this flexibility clause as designel solely for the purpose of reducing tariffs. The act had scarcely been placed upon the statute books when they began clamoring for executive action for the reduction of the rates. Without any regard whatever for the reasonableness of the import duties imposed and without consideration of the effect upon American industries, these free traders wanted a wholesale exercise of the executive power for the rXeduction of the republican protective tariff duties.

President Harding did not look upon the flexibility clause as bestowing upon him any such broad power over the tariff law. He regarded the tariff act as establishing not only the tariff principles, which should be observed, but the details of import tazes, changeable only where extraordinary circumstances called for action. He did not regard it as his prerogative to undertake a wholesale revision of the tariff law enacted by that branch of the government which the constitution prescribes shall have the power to enact revenue legislation. It is readily apparent that President Coolidge takes a very similar view.

One clever device of the free trade exponents has been to assume that every move in favor of protection is inspired by politics, while every move in the direction of abandonment of protection is actuated by regard of the public welfare. Thus, one periodical, which has an unbroken record against a protective tariff, cites the fact that importers ask for the reduction of the duty on lemons and asserts that "opposition on the part of California fruit growers to any reduction in the duty on lemons has injected a political element into the proposal." As a matter of fact, it did not inject a political elefent but rather a purely econofic element. The sole question is whether the California lemon growers shall be subjected to destructive competition from abroad.

The same free trade propagandists insist that President Collidge should give carte blanche to the tariff commission, which would mean that he abdicate his authority and shirk his responsibility under the flexibility clauses of the law. That law did not vest the tariff commission with power to act in the changing of the rates. It placed that responsibility solely upon the president, merely requiring the tariff commission to make investigations as to the facts.

ART, EMOTIONS AND COMMON SENSE

MADAME Lucrezia Bori, who says prima donnas should not marry. unwittingly confesses a "superiority complex". Madame is a prima donna herself, and also she has had experience in matrimony. There is but one interpretation to put on her words, and that is that she considers are of greater consequence to the artist and to the public than is domesticity, for we assume from her language that she considers art and matrifony incompatible. And yet, the greater artists of the world have been married, most of them happily.

The artist who finds no time for normal human emotions is sub-normal, and sub-normalcy is a sign of inferiority and not of superiority.

The trouble with a great many artists is that the applause of the moment bewilders them into the belief that they are of finer clay than the ordinary folk, and that they must not be judged by conventional standards. Even dancers sometimes become obsessed of this idea, as if either intelligence of emotion possibly could be an affinity of "foot work."

The ability to sing depends primarily upon the physical structure of the throat. Musical genius has been discovered in persons not only otherwise commonplace, but wholly lacking in common sense.

Madame Bori is not of this type, but she encourages it in the belief that it is entitled to special consideration and indulgence.

Cut In Price By Standard Oil Co. Is To Limit Stock

The reduction in the price of gasoline on the part of the Standard Oil company is a bid for increased consumption, and an effort to reduce large surplus stocks.

When taken in relation to the recent address of Chairman Bedford of Titusville, Pa., it comes naturally. He showed that gasoline stocks had increased 50.32 per cent between January 1 and May 31, while production had gained but 33:55 per cent over the corresponding period in 1922. The relative increase in gasoline output was due to higher gasoline content of crude refined, and to improvement in the refining methods.

Taking the 1922 average of consumption of gasoline per motor vehicle in operation. Bedford estimated that the 1923 consumption by motor users would be 182,630,950 barrels. The 1922 consumption was 125,952 barrels per vehicle. The consumption for 1923 he based upon a total of 14,500,000 cars in operation.

"Figuring upon California production. Bedford computed upon gasoline consumption from California, west of the Rockies; gasoline made in the east from California crude; gasoline shipped east from California. He figures an excess over requirements of eastern gasoline bearing crudes, in addition to the California surplus, of 94,583,400 barrels, or 259,132 barrels daily. He finds it an economic problem verging upon the critical. He says in conclusion:

"Whatever the outcome, and it cannot be more than approximately foretold, the extent of the problem of enormous storage for either crude or for gasoline must rest upon the results of such expedients as already resorted to, such as the reduction in price of certain grades of crude, the prorating of runs and other steps designed to curtail production. If the task of financing and carrying over a huge surplus of either crude or gasoline is forced on the industry, it will undertake and accomplish this as it has before undertaken and accomplished tasks beyond its apparent capacity. It is an economic problem which as vitally affects the gasoline consumer of the future as the gasoline user of today, and in a highly competitive business such as the oil industry its ultimate solution will rest with the law of supply and demand."

Doctor Parrish Must Face Jury In Sourman Case

As the result of a verdict rendered by the coroner's jury Thursday night holding him responsible for the death of Mrs. Clarence Sourman, at an early hour yesterday morning, Dr. F. W. Parrish, apracticing physician of Antioch was taken into custody.

The coroner's jury held that Mrs. Sourman met death from shock and internal hemorrhage caused by accidental collision of automobiles of H. V. Sourman and Dr. Parrish. The verdict of the jury also held Dr. Parrish "responsible for the death" and "guilty of gross criminal negligence" and recommended prosecution.

After the verdict of the jury had been returned, Sourman swore to a complaint charging Dr. Parrish with manslaughter.

The accident that resulted in the death of Mrs. Sourman occurred on the highway between Antioch and Oakley last week. The car in which she was riding with her husband H. V. Sourman, was turned over in the wreck and Mrs. Sourman met instant death. The Sourmans were en route to their home at Oakley at the time and Dr. Parrish was returning to Antioch, it is said.

Face More rrors Hourly In Quake Zone

GHAI, Sept. 7.—New horrors d by the refugees in the 20,- are miles laid waste in the of September 1 in Japan. meless millions face a food ge and a polluted water sup- hile the bodies of unburied dead y the thousands rotting in the a and hourly increasing the danger pestilence.

The most tremendous horror in the story of man has by no means run e full of its terrors.

dded to the above appalling gedy, pestilence, plague, disease famine have made their horrible earance in the stricken area as rts of an outbreak of cholera, ntery and yellow fever com- d with an acute food shortage nd around Tokio and Yokohama ch this city tonight.

spite of temporary relief meas- s, the food supply for millions homeless in the disaster zone is olly inadequate and stark famine eatens to add to the general hor- or.

Polluted well and river water—the ly available supply for millions of r-crazed people—is beginning to d to the death toll already claimed earthouate, fire and an all-destroy- backwash from a convulsed sea. he great port of Yokohama is tirely wiped out while the once ud capital of Japan is but a rd ghost of a glory that was. Half a million will be the unquestionable toll of dead and injured throughout the stricken area. One hundred thousand dead are reported in Yokohama alone, while 25,000 perished in Tokio. The estimate of the number who were killed in the districts surrounding Tokio and Yokohama cannot be made at this time.

A sensational report from Tokio says that plans of a gigantic rebellion of Koreans were revealed as a result of organized anti-Japanese activities of Korean residents of the capital in the confusion immediately following Saturday's cataclysm.

Fifteen thousand Koreans are said to have been interned in the vicinity of Tokio by the Japanese military during the last few days. They have been interned under heavy guard at Narashino Camp in Chiba, where the German troops taken prisoner at Tsingtao in 1915, were kept during the World War.

The Koreans are reported to have been waiting for the regent's marriage ceremony and procession for their first open outbreak against the Japanese government in Tokio.

Epworth League Enjoyed Skate At Idora Park

A large crowd of local Wesley Epworth Leaguers spent last evening at Idora Park. Upon arrival at the amusement grounds, the group immediately rushed to the skating rink, and within ten minutes all were on the floor, in a group, making themselves very prominent among the Oaklanders.

After this frolicking on the wheels for several hours, the merrymakers left the rink and took part in some of the other features. The group was brought into more prominence the majority of the time by being centered by the huge ray of light from the newly installed spot light on the roof of the park dance hall.

Following this entertainment the Leaguers left for their homes, with the feeling that they had enjoyed a happy evening.

The members classed skating as their most popular diversion, and a team will probably be arranged, as the organization has some good material for a first-class team.

Machines, for the crowd, were furnished by Messrs. Lee Brown, Clarence Fritz, George Colclough, and Horace Lufkin, and Mr. and Mrs. I. D. Kirkpatrick and others.

The standing committee of social activities, headed by Miss Catherine Hayes, had charge of the evening's entertainment.

A committee composed of C. E. Parker, C. W. Longacre, C. W. Cook, W. W. Fraser and W. H. Bowman has been named to consider and submit plans for the new church building which is expected to be started soon.

About the Limit.

Your friend Wheeler is a crank on punctuality, isn't he?" said Smith. "I should say he is," replied Brown. "Why, he even carries his watch in the rear pocket of his trousers, just to prevent his ever being behind time."

Do It Now

Richmond People Should Not Wait Until It Is Too Late

The appalling death rate from kidney disease is due largely to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they become serious. The slight symptoms often give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer may slip gradually into some serious form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backache, headache, dizzy spells; if the kidney secretions are irregular of passage, do not delay. Help the kidneys at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders. They act where others fail. Over one hundred thousand people have recommended them. Here's a case at home.

Mrs. I. C. Rudy, 831 Eighth St., Richmond, says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results. My kidneys were weak and out of order. I had frequent dizzy headaches and the action of my kidneys was never regular. Doan's kidney pills were recommended to me and I used them. They soon relieved the trouble."

"Chicago Sal" Is Powerful Story Of Changed Life

That crime is largely the porduct of environment was powerfully demonstrated in the Principal Picture at the Richmond T. & D. theater, today, as an Irving Cummings production. The story is woven around a young girl, who, while she remains in the city, is a criminal.

"Chicago Sal" was a product of her environment. She only knew crooks and the life of the cabarets. It wasn't a clean environment. On the other hand Steve MacLaren knew only the good, honest environment of the country. He had been reared in the pathway of virtue. So the two met one day in the country, and Sally found redemption. She had found the real environment.

Alice Lake gives one of the most compelling performances of her career and Milton Sills in the opposite roles demonstrates again why he has a sure place in the esteem of the picture-going public.

Harvey Gates wrote the story, which is an accurate slice of present-day life—in the under world of Chicago and the open countryside. It palpitates with human touches and tugs at the emotions. Its qualities are so definite—so certain, that it is good for any audience. Don't miss it.

Night Gym Class Will Be Started For Business Men

Business men of the city are to be afforded opportunity for recreation upon the completion of the Roosevelt High School gymnasium, when a night gym will be started and will be conducted four night a week from 7:30 until 9 o'clock. Physical Director Seawright will supervise the class. Members of the Y. M. C. A. business and professional men's volley ball class have signified their intentions of joining the class.

Pupils and teachers will have a holiday next Monday, Admission Day, as Richmond schools are to be closed. The teachers' institute vacation will be held during the week commencing October 22.

Coal Striks Is Thing of Past For This Year

The threatened strike of the anthracite coal miners was settled at 7 o'clock last night, when representatives of both operators and miners met in the office of Governor Pinchot and signed up the working agreement for the last fiscal year.

At an early hour yesterday it became evident the strike was a thing of the past, save for the formality of affixing signatures to the document, which settles the disputed points of the eight hour day, the wage scale, and other points of difference.

At the meeting last night John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, was asked to issue an order sending the miners back to work. The deilvery of this order will require from three to six days for its consummation.

General satisfaction is expressed by manufacturers throughout the country over the outcome of the negotiations just closed.

Burning Heart Threads

The Branding Iron

By Katharine Newlin Burt

"Let Us Conduct This Unfortunate Interview Like Gentlemen, If Possible."

begged. "Let us conduct this unfortunate interview like gentlemen, if possible."

Jasper laughed. "As you say—if possible. Why, man, it was Betty who helped me to install her here, it was Betty who chose the furnishings for her apartment, who helped her buy her clothes, who engaged her maid, who gave her most of her training. This is the most preposterous, the most filthy perversion of the truth. Betty must know it better than any one else. Come, now, Woodward, there's something more in it than this?" Jasper had himself in hand; but it was easy now to see the effort it cost him. The veins of his forehead were swollen.

"I shall not discuss the matter with you. Betty has excellent evidence, unimpeachable witnesses. There is no doubt in my mind, nor in the minds of her lawyers, that she will win her suit and get her divorce, her release. Of course, you will not contest—"

Jasper stopped in his pacing which had begun to take the curious, circling, weaving form characteristic of him, and, standing now with his head thrown back, he spoke sonorously.

"Do you imagine for one instant, Kane—does Betty imagine for one instant—that I shall not contest?"

This changed the look of cold pleasure in Woodward's eyes, which grew blank again. "Do you mean me to understand—Naturally, I took it for granted that you would act as most gentlemen act under the circumstances."

"Then you have taken too much for granted, you and Betty. Ten years ago your sister gave herself to me. She is mine. I will not for a whim, for a passion, for a temporary alienation, let her go. Neither will I have my good name and the name of a good woman besmirched for the sake of this impertinent desire for a release. I love my wife"—his voice was especially Hebraic and especially abhorrent to the other—"and as a husband I mean to keep her from the ruin this divorce would mean to her—"

"Far from being her ruin, Morena, it would be the saving of her. Her ruin was as nearly as possible brought about ten years ago, when against the advice, against the wishes of every one who loved her, she made her insane marriage with an underbred, commercial, and licentious Jew. She was seventeen and you seized your opportunity."

Jasper had stepped close. He was a head taller and several inches broader of shoulder than his brother-in-law. "As long as you are in my house, don't insult me. I am, as you say, a Jew, and I am, as you say, of a commercial family. But I am not, I have never been licentious. Is it necessary to use such language? You suggested that this interview be conducted by us like gentlemen."

"The man who refuses to give her liberty to a wife that loathes him, scarcely comes under the definition."

"My ideas on the matter are different. We need not discuss them. If you will let me read my wife's letter, I think that we can come to an end of this."

Woodward unwillingly surrendered the small, gray enevolpe to a quivering, outstretched hand. Jasper turned away and stood near the lamp. But his excitement prevented him from reading. The angular writing jumped before his eyes. At last the words straightened themselves.

"I am glad that you have given me this opportunity to escape from a life that for a long time has been dreadful to me. Ten years ago I made a disaster of my life and yours. Forgive me if you can and let me escape. I will not see you again. Whatever you may have to say, please say it to Woodward. From now on he is my protector. In other matters there are my lawyers. It is absolutely not to be thought of that I should speak to you. I hope never to see you alone. I want you to hate me and this note ought to make it easy for you.

Jasper stared at the name. He was utterly bewildered, utterly staggered, by the amazing dissimulation practiced by this small, soft-lipped, round-eyed girl who had lived with him for so long, sufficiently pliable, sufficiently agreeable. What was back of it all? Another man, of course. In imagination he was examining the faces of his acquaintances, narrowing his lids as though the real men passed in review before him.

"Perhaps you understand the situation better now?" asked Woodward cruelly.

Jasper's intense pain and humiliation gave him a sort of calm. He seemed entirely cool when he moved back toward his brother-in-law; his eyes were clear, the heat had gone from his temples. He was even smiling a little, though there was a white, even frame to his lips.

"I shall not write to Betty nor attempt to see her," he said quietly. "But I shall ask you to take a message to her."

Woodward assented.

"Tell her she shall have her release, but to get it she will have to walk through the mire and there will be no one waiting for her on the other side. Can you remember that? Not even you will be there." He was entirely self-assured so that Woodward felt a chill of dismay.

"I shall contest the suit," went on Jasper, "and I believe that I shall win it. You may tell Betty so if you like or she can wait to hear it from my lawyer." He put the envelope into his pocket, crossed the room, and held back one of the crimson curtains of the door.

"If you have nothing more to say," he smiled, "neither have I. Goodby."

He bowed slightly, and Woodward found himself passing before him in silence and some confusion. He stood for a moment in the hall and, having stammered his way to a cold "Good-afternoon," he put on his hat and went out.

Jasper returned to the empty drawing room and began his weaving march.

Before he could begin his spinning which he hoped would entangle Betty and leave her powerless for him to hold or to release at will, he must go to Jane West and tell her what trick life with his help had played upon her. The prospect was bitterly distasteful. Jasper accused himself of selfishness. Because she cared nothing for the world, was a creature apart, he had let the world think what it would. He knew that an askance look would not hurt her; for himself, secure in innocence, he did not care; for Betty, he had thought her cruelly certain of him.

He went to Jane the day after his interview with Woodward Kane. It was Sunday afternoon. She was out, but came in very soon, and he stood up to meet her with an air of confusion and guilt.

"What's the matter with you?" she asked, pulling her gloves from her long hands.

Her quickly observant eyes swept him. She walked to him and stood near. The frosty air was still about her and her face was lightly stung to color with exercise. Her wild eyes were startling under the brim of her smart, tailored hat.

Jasper put a hand on either of her shoulders and bent his head before her. "My poor child—if I'd only left you in your kitchen!"

Joan tightened her lips, then smiled uncertainly. "You've got me scared," she said, stepped back and sat down, her hands in her muff. "What is it?" she asked; and in that moment of waiting she was sickly reminded of other moments in her life—of the nearing sound of Pierre's webs on a crystal winter night, of the sound of Prosper's footsteps going away from her up the mountain trail on a sword-like, autumn morning.

Jasper began his pacing. Feeling carefully for delicate phrases, he told her Betty's accusation, of her purpose.

Joan took off her hat, pushed back the hair from her forehead; then, as he came to the end, she looked up at him. Her pupils were larger than usual and the light, frosty tint of rose had left her cheeks.

"Would you mind telling me that again?" she asked.

He did so, more explicitly.

"She thinks, Betty thinks, that I have been—that we have been—? She thinks that of me? No wonder she hasn't been coming to see me!" She stopped, staring blindly at him; then, "You must tell her it isn't true," she said pitifully, and the quiver of her lips hurt him.

"Ah! But she doesn't want to believe that, my dear. She wants to believe the worst. It is her opportunity to escape me."

"Haven't you loved her? Have you hurt her?" asked Joan.

"God knows I have loved her. I have never hurt her—consciously. Even she cannot think that I have."

"Why must she blame me? Why do I have to be brought into this, Mr. Morena? Can't she go away from you? Why do the lawyers have to take it up? You are unhappy, and I so sorry. But you wouldn't want her to stay if —if she doesn't love you?"

"I want her. I mean to keep her or —break her." He turned his back to say this and went toward the window. Joan, fascinated, watched his fingers working into one another, tightening, crushing. "It's another man she wants," he said hoarsely, "and if I can prevent it, she shall not have him. I will force her to keep her vows to me—force her. If it kills her, I'll break this passion, this fancy. I'll have her back—" He wheeled round, showing a twitching face. "I'll prove her infidelity whether she's been unfaithful or not, and then I'll take her back, after the world has given her one of its names—"

"You Don't Love Her," Said Joan, Very White.

"You don't love her," said Joan, very white. "You want to brand her."

"By G—d!" swore the Jew, "and I will brand her. I'll brand her."

He fumbled in his pocket and brought out the small envelope Woodward Kane had handed to him the day before. He stood turning the letter about in his hands as though some such meaningless occupation was a necessity to him. Joan's eyes, falling upon the letter, widened and fixed.

"She has written to me," said Jasper. "She wants her liberty. She wants it in such a way that she will fly clear and I—yes, and you, too, will be left in the mud. There's a man somewhere, of course. She thinks she has evidence, witnesses against me. I don't know what rubbish she has got together. But I'm going to fight her. I'm going to win. I'll save you if I can, Jane; if not, of course I am at your service for any amends—"

He stopped in his halting speech, for Joan had stood up and was moving across the room, her eyes fastened on the letter in his hands. She had the air of a sleep-walker.

She opened a drawer of her desk, took out an old tin box, once used for tobacco, and drew forth a small, gray envelope torn in two. Then she came back to him and said, "Let me see that letter," and he obeyed as though she had the right to ask.

She took his letter and hers and compared the two, the small, gray squares lying unopened on her knee, and she spoke incomprehensibly.

"Betty is 'the tall child,'" she said, and laughed with a catch in her breath.

Jasper looked at the envelopes. They were identical; Betty's gray note paper crossed by Betty's angular, upright hand, very bold, very black. The torn envelope was addressed to Prosper Gael. Jasper took it, opened each half, laid the parts together, and read:

"Jasper is dying. By the time you get this he will be dead. If you can forgive me for having failed you in courage last year, come back. What I have been to you before I will be again, only, this time, we can love openly. Come back."

"Jane"—Morena spoke brokenly—"what does it mean?"

"He built that cabin in Wyoming for her," said Joan, speaking as though Jasper had seen the canyon hiding-place and known its history, "and she didn't come. He brought me there on his sled. I was hurt. I was terribly hurt. He took care of me—"

"Prosper?" Jasper thrust in. His face was drawn with excitement.

"Yes. Prosper Gael. I was there with him for months. At first I wasn't strong enough to go away, and then, after a while, I tried. But I was too lonely and sorrowful. In the spring I loved him. I thought I loved him. He wanted me. I was all alone in the world. I didn't know that he loved another woman. I thought she was dead—like Pierre. Prosper had clothes for her there. I suppose—I've thought it out since—that she was to leave as if for a short journey, and then secretly go on that long one, and she couldn't take many things with her. So he had beautiful stuffs for her—and a little suit to wear in the snow. That's how I came to call her 'the tall child,' seeing that little suit, long and narrow. . . . This letter came one morning, one awfully bright morning. He read it and went out and the next day he went away. Afterward I found the letter torn in two beside his desk on the floor. I took it and I've always kept it. 'The tall child'! He looked so terrible when I called her that. . . . And she was your Betty all the time!"

"Yes," said Morena slowly. "She was my Betty all the time." He gave her a twisted smile and put the two papers carefully into an inside pocket. "I am going to keep this letter, Jane. Truly the ways of the Lord are past finding out."

Joan looked at him in growing uneasiness. Her mind, never quick to take in all the bearings and the consequences of her acts, was beginning to work. "What are you going to do with it, Mr. Morena? I don't want you to do Betty a hurt. She must have loved Prosper Gael. Perhaps she still loves him."

This odd appeal drew another difficult smile from Betty's husband. "Quite obviously she still loves him, Jane. She is divorcing me so that she can marry him."

"But, Mr. Morena, I don't believe he will marry her now. He is tired of her. He is that kind of lover. He gets tired. Now he would like to marry me. He told me so. Perhaps—if Betty knew that—she might come back to you, without branding her."

Jasper was startled out of his vengeful stillness.

"Prosper Gael wants to marry you? He has told you so?"

"Yes." She was sad and humbled. "Now he wants to marry me and once he told me things about marrying. He said"—Joan quoted slowly, her eyes half-closed in Prosper's manner, her voice a musical echo of his thin, vibrant tone—"'It's man's most studied insult to woman.'"

"Yes, that's Prosper," murmured Jasper.

"I wouldn't marry him, Mr. Morena, even if I could—not if I were to be burnt for refusing him!"

Jasper looked probingly at her, a new speculation in his eyes. She had begun to fit definitely into his plans. It seemed there might be a way to frustrate Betty and to keep a hold upon his valuable protegee. "Are you so sure of that, Jane?"

"Ah!" she answered; "you doubt it because I once thought I loved him? But you don't know all about me. . . ."

He stood silent, busy with his weaving. At last he looked at her rather blankly, impersonally. Joan was conscious of a frightened, lonely chill. She put out her hand uncertainly, a wrinkle appearing sharp and deep between her eyes.

New Paper From Southern Center

Current issues of the Illustrated Daily News, published in Los Angeles by Cornelius D. Vanderbilt, Jr., have been received by the Record-Herald.

The paper is unique in the amount of illustrative matter used and the independent policy adopted by its publisher. It has a prosperous appearance and announcement is made in the fourth paper issued that new presses have been ordered to care for the volume of its business.

A little while ago Vanderbilt was touring the country as a cub reporter. He is now a publisher in one of the most thoroughly supplied centers of the state from the newspaper standpoint. It is possible he will meet with success in his chosen field.

Pyhsicians Say 'I Can't Understand'

Stockton, Calif. June 30 1923

To Whom It May Concern:—

Last January I was told by four American doctors that I had hardened arteries and Bright's disease of the Kidneys—and that both were incurable. They could not help me.

Some friends of mine persuaded me to try the FONG WAN HERB CO. I had no hope of obtaining relief from them—thinking that if American science could not help me I was doomed. However, I called on FONG WAN and he told me that I had high blood pressure and weak kidneys and that he could cure me easily in five weeks.

I began treatments with him, and after the first two weeks, the same American doctors who had pronounced my case incurable could find nothing at all wrong with me. They said that I was entirely well. They could only shake their heads and say: "IT'S IMPOSSIBLE TO PUT A NEW HEART, ARTERIES OR KIDNEYS IN A MAN. I CAN'T UNDERSTAND." Nevertheless this is what Fong Wan did for me and I have never felt better in my life than I do onw.

It is six months since I took treatment, and I am as well as I ever was in my life. FONG WAN brought about my cure in five weeks. I cannot too highly recommend the FONG WAN HERB CO. to all who are in need of treatments. E. B. PEPPIN

Care of Associated Oil Co., Stockton, Calif.

Heart Trouble is something that should not be neglected as it is far more dangerous than other ailments, such as kidney or stomach trouble, rheumotism asthma, headache or cough. Moral: consult Fong Wan before it is too late.

The FONG WAN HERB Co., has for many years had the greatest volume of Chinese herb business of any of the California herb companies, not only in Oakland, but in the natino. The FONG WAN herbalist has relieved over 5000 sufferers residing around the Bay Cities. He had given proof of his ability by doing wonderful work. He has been retained continuously for the past eight years. He has had the greatest number of genuine testimonials printed in the Oakland dailies. He never offers bait of any kind in order to attract business. Yet, the FONG WAN CO. is the most prosperous herb company on the coast.

$70,000.00 TO BE INVESTED

For the benefit of the sick and the interest of the FONG WAN HERB CO., a concrete building of beautiful Occidental and Oriental design will be erected within the next few months. Never before in the history of the Earth has there been such a building erected or owned by any Chinese herbalist.

Another GREAT COAT SALE

A few days ago, we held our first $68 Coat Sale and our patrons were so favorably impressed that we at once took steps to duplicate the opportunity for all their friends. Hence, today brings a repetition of the sensational sale.

"These values are too good to be true" exclaimed one customer at the first sale, and we assure you that these are even better in every way. This customer's recommendation, added to our own, should prove a good criterion of the worth of these coats.

Long, straight-line styles, and the latest most approved fashions abound, the model pictured being decidedly typical. Rich, lustrous materials, beautifully lined, many trimmed with luxurious Viatka fox, wolf, beaver, nutria or squirrel fur; some with fur at the collar, cuffs and bottom. Every coat an aristocrat!

Because the styles are exclusive, they will not be shown on our racks, and we request that you ask to see these coats. Sizes 16 to 18 misses' and 36 to 44 ladies'.

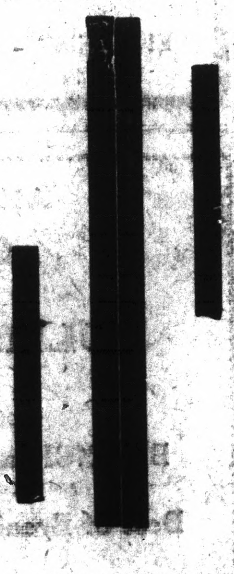
Is Richmond our City?



Are you proud of your city? Do you wish to see it grow? Of course you do—every one of us has a feeling of pride for Richmond away down deep in our hearts.

Now here's the rub. If you and I make our purchases out of town, we are robbing our city of money that should be put in circulation here—where you and I have a chance of seeing it put Richmond over the top.

Read the advertisements as they appear from time to time. You will find that you can shop just as economically here in Richmond as any where else—and with greater convenience.

SIDE LIGHTS OF NEAR NEWS AND SMALL MATTERS

He's an Irish lad and he has been four years over from "th' ould sod." Every morning when the first car leaves the barns he is there with his lunch kit and a weary look and he sinks into a seat in the car and slips off into untroubled slumber. There is a look of contentment and happiness about him sleeping and waking and the Observor has often wondered what is the secret of his pleasant manner. Yesterday he volunteered the statement, "I'm all excited this morning. Me ould woman's comin' frae th' ould counthry." Then he told in brief sentences the story. Four years have elapsed since he left the widowed mother and twin sister in Ireland and came to America to make for them a little home. The home is made and the loved ones arrived at 7:50 after six thousand miles of travel. What genuine joy shone on all three faces when son and brother clasped his women folks in his arms at the Oakland Mole. And that is what makes him contented with life, this stripling of a boy. He has accomplished his darling dream for those who are dear to him.

After a night spent in patroling the city, Officers Ceridoni and Messenger were making an early morning survey of Masdonald avenue. The Observer musta needs ask if the night has been prolific of any excitement. "Hard luck!" was the reply. "We have made no arrests. The only thing that has looked like encitement was that fellow we made leave town in a hurry." On a lonely street away in the north end a car had stood at the curb. A single figure was visible. The officers wished a closer look and flashed a night light upon the automobile. There was instant action. The lone figure straightened, in went the clutch and the car shot away for the rural solitudes, leaving two disgusted officers to wonder what caused the sudden exodus.

Eight hours for labor, eight for sleep and eight for recreation is the dictum of heatlh experts, but there is a business woman on Macdonald avenue who has had less than four hours sleep in twenty-four for two years past. You would expect such a life to make her irritable, but when you meet her day by day she has always the smile and the pleasant word for you. Perhaps she is paying rather high for her success in life but the public is benefitinfi by her expenditure of strength and nerve force.

J. P. Strom says they have a mighty fine jail and an exceedingly comfortable patrol wagon in Sacramento. He visited the former, riding to it in the latter, so he is able to judge. But, he had company, as several members of the local Lions were with him and it was all a joke perpetrated by their fellow clb members. Twenty-eight members of the local Lions attended the state fair on Thursday.

Dempsey Nearly Ready For His Mix With Firpo

SARATOGA, Sept. 7.—Jack Dempsey has reached the culminating degree of his training for the Firpo bout, his workout today consisting of a six round match with light sparring partners.

The champion appeared to be drawn to razor-edged physical perfection, working wit hall of the dash and speed of a lightweight. When he finished with his sparring partners, Dempsey's breathing was normal. He worked out before several experts, who invaded the camp after watching Luis Angel Firpo in action at Atlantic City. Dempsey's speed, they said, was amazing, compared to the movements of the giant South American.

Mary Carr And Clever Canine In "The Custard Cup"

Two of the characters in "The Custard Cup," the widely read book, which has been put into film form by William Fox, are "Mrs. Penfield" and "Lettie." In their proper persons "Mrs. Penfield" is the well loved Mary Carr of "Over the Hill" and "Silver Wings," the featured player of the cast. "Lettie" is the famous ltitle Miriam Battista, who made a big hit in "Humoresque." "Lettie" is one of "Mrs. Penfield's" adopted children and shares, with the two boys "Crink" and "Thad" the untiring devotion of the cheerful and warm hearted "Penzie," as she is called by her friends and neighbors.

There is an interesting dog in "The Custard Cup." This dog is one of the cleverest animal actors on the screen. Discussion arose while the picture was being made as to what sort of a dog it was. The guesses ranged from Russian wolfhound to Mexican hairless. But the dog expert of the studio decided it was a water spaniel. That went until the subject came to the attention of the publicity department, which decided that any dog that plays in Fox pictures is automatically a Fox terrier.

Witness Close To Fine For Failure To Reach Court

Miss Hazel Beer, a San Francisco actress, narrowly escaped being sent to jail for contempt yesterday by Judge McKenzie. She was a witness in the damage suit of Chandler N. Williams against the California Transit company, and failed to appear at the appointed time.

A bench warrant for her arrest was issued and upon her appearance in court she was reprimanded for her failure to answer the summons.

Miss Beer declared that she had telephoned an attorney and asked that the court be informed she was unable to appear on the day set.

Williams is suing the Transit company for $45,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been received in a collision with a motor stage at San Pablo. The Transit company subsequently filed a cross-complaint asking for $1000 damages from Williams

Miss Beer was a passenger in the stage at the time of the wreck.

After the testimony of several witnesses was heard the case was continued till next Tuesday morning.

Red Cross Makes Plans To Raise Richmond Quota

A campaign to be put on by the local chapter of the Red Cross to raise a quota assigned them, the minimum of which is $3250, was outlined last night at a meeting of the board of directors of the Red Cross at the Lincoln school. Dr. C. L. Abbott was named to head the drive, but as he was not present his appointment could not be confimed.

It was decided to send letters to various organizations and businesses appealing to them to get behind the drive, which will start with full force on Tuesday, as little can be done on Monday on account of the holiday.

Dr. T. A. Boyer was named a committee to take up with the Ministerial Union the matter of announcing the drive and boost it from the pulpits on Sunday. W. T. Helms, president of the local chapter, presided over the meeting.
